STONE. n. f. [stain, Gothick; stan, Saxon; steen, Dutch.]
 1. Stones are bodies insipid, hard, not ductile or malleable, nor soluble in water.
Woodward's Meth. Foss.
 We understand by the term stones fossil bodies, solid, not ductile under the hammer, fixed in the fire, not easily melted in it, and not to be dissolved by water. Stones are arranged under two distinct series, the softer and the harder. Of the softer stones there are three general distinctions. 1. The foliaceous or flaky, as talk. 2. The fibrous, as the asbestus. 3. The granulated, as the gypsum. Of the harder stones there are also three general distinctions. 1. The opaque stones, as limestone. 2. The semi-pellucid, as agate. 3. The pellucid, as crystal and the gems.
Hill's Mat. Med.
 Should I go to church, and see the holy edifice of stone, And not bethink me frant of dangerous rocks! Shakespeare.
 The English used the stones to reinforce the pier. Huyward.
 Piece of stone cut for building.
 He shall bring forth the head stone with shoutings. Zech. iv.
 2. Gem; precious stone.
 I thought I saw
 Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearls, Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels. Shakespeare. Rich. III.
 3. Any thing made of stone.
 Lend me a looking-glass;
 If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
 Why then the lives. Shakespeare.
 4. Calculous concretion in the kidneys or bladder; the disease arising from a calculus.
 A specific remedy for preventing of the stone I take to be the constant use of alehoof-ale. Temple.
 A gentleman supposed his difficulty in urining proceeded from the stone. Wise's Surgery.
 5. The case which in some fruits contains the seed.
 To make fruits without core or stone is a curiosity. Bacon.
 6. Testicle.
 7. A weight containing fourteen pounds.

 1. Made of stone.
 Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
 Can be retentive to the strength of spirit. Shakespeare. Jul. Cæs.
 With love's light wings did I o'erperch these walls;
 For stony limits cannot hold love out. Shakespeare. Rom. and Jul.
 Nor slept the winds
 Within their stony caves, but rust'd abroad
 From the four hinges of the world, and fell
 On the vex'd wilderness, whose tallest pines,
 Though rooted deep as high and sturdiest oaks,
 Bow'd their stiff necks, laden with stormy blasts,
 Or torn up sheer. Milton's Paradise Regain'd.
 Here the marshy grounds approach your fields,
 And there the foil a stony harvest yields.
 As in spires he stood, he turn'd to stone;

 Adam, at the news,
 Heart-struck with chilling gripe of sorrow stood. Milton.
 STOOLE. n. f. [stolt, Gothick; stool, Saxon; steel, Dutch.]
 1. A seat without a back, so distinguished from a chair.
 If a chair be defined a seat for a single person, with a back belonging to it, then a stool is a seat for a single person without a back.
 Thou fearful fool,
 Why takest not of the same fruit of gold?
 Ne fittest down on that same silver stool,
 To rest thy weary person in the shadow cold? Fa. Quen.
 Now which were wife, and which were fools?
 Poor Alma sits between two stoole:
 The more she reads, the more perplexed. Prior.
 2. Evacuation by purgative medicines.
 There be medicines that move stoole, and not urine; some other urine, and not stoole: those that purge by stoole, are such as enter not at all, or little, into the mesenteric veins; but either at the first are not digestible by the stomach, and therefore move immediately downwards to the guts; or else are afterwards rejected by the mesenteric veins, and so turn likewise downwards to the guts. Bacon's Natural History.
 The peristaltick motion, or repeated changes of contraction and dilatation, is not in the lower guts, else one would have a continual need of going to stoole. Arbutnot on Ailments.
 3. Stool of Repentance, or cutty stool, in the kirk of Scotland, is somewhat analogous to the pillory. It is elevated above the congregation. In some places there may be a seat in it; but it is generally without, and the person stands therein who has been guilty of fornication, for three Sundays in the forenoon; and after

 Like unto the boughs of this tree he bended downward, and stoop'd toward the earth. Raleigh.
 2. To lean forward standing or walking.
 When Pelopidas and Imenias were sent to Artaxerxes,
 Pelopidas did nothing unworthy; but Imenias let fall his ring to the ground, and, stooping for that, was thought to make his adoration. Stillingfleet.
 He stooping open'd my left side, and took
 From thence a rib. Milton.
 3. To yield; to bend; to submit.
 I am the son of Henry the fifth.
 Who made the dauphin and the French to stoop. Shakespeare.
 Mighty in her ships flood Carthage long,
 And swept the riches of the world from far;
 Yet stoop'd to Rome, less wealthy, but more strong. Dryden.
 4. To descend from rank or dignity.
 He that condescended so far, and stoop'd so low, to invite to be brought up to heaven, will not refuse us a gracious reception there. Boyle's Seraphick Love.
 Where men of great wealth stoop to husbandry, it multiplieth riches exceedingly. Bacon.
 5. To yield; to be inferior.
 Death his death-wound shall then receive,
 And stoop inglorious. Milton.
 These are arts, my prince,
 In which your Zania does not stoop to Rome. Addison.
 6. To sink from resolution or superiority; to condescend.
 They, whose authority is required unto the satisfying of your demand, do think it both dangerous to admit such concurrence of divided minds, and unmeet that their laws, which, being once solemnly established, are to exact obedience of all men and to constrain thereunto, should so far stoop as to hold themselves in suspense from taking any effect upon you, till some disputer can persuade you to be obedient. Hosker.
 7. To come down on prey as a falcon.
 The bird of Jove stoop'd from his airy tour,
 Two birds of gayest plum before him drove. Milton.
 8. To alight from the wing.
 Satan ready now
 To stoop with wearied wings and willing feet,
 On the bare outside of this world. Milton.

 And stoop with closing pinions from above. Dryden.
 9. To sink to a lower place.
 Cow'ring low
 With blandishment, each bird stoop'd on his wing. Milton.
 STOOPE. n. f. [from the verb.]
 1. Act of stooping; inclination downward.
 2. Descent from dignity or superiority.
 Can any loyal subject see
 With patience such a stoop from sovereignty?
 An ocean pour'd upon a narrow brook? Dryden.
 3. Fall of a bird upon his prey.
 Now will I wander through the air,
 Mount, make a stoop at every fair.
 An eagle made a stoop at him in the middle of his exaltation, and carried him away. L'Estrange.
 4. [Stoppa, Saxon; stope, Dutch.] A vessel of liquor.
 Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of Othello. Shakespeare. Othello.
 There's nothing more in me, sir, but may be squeez'd out without racking, only a stoop or two of wine.
 A caldron of fat beef, and stoop of ale,
 On the huzzing mob shall more prevail,
 Than if you give them, with the nicest art,
 Regouls of peacocks brains, or filbert tart. King.
 STOOPLINGLY. adv. [from stooping.] With inclination downwards.
 Nani was noted to tread softly, to walk stoopingly, and raise himself from benches with laborious gesture. Watson.
 To STOP. v. a. [stopper, Fr. stoppare, Ital. stoppen, Dutch.]
 1. To hinder from progressive motion.
 From the oracle
 They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had
 Shall stop or spur me. Shakespeare.
 Can any dresses find a way
 To stop the approaches of decay,
 And mend a ruin'd face? Derfet.

 3. To hinder from action.
 As the truth of Christ is in me, no man shall stop me of this boasting. 2 Cor. xi. 10.
 4. To put an end to the motion or action of any thing.
 Friend, 'tis the duke's pleasure,
 Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
 Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd. Shakespeare. King Lear.
 Almon falls, pierc'd with an arrow from the distant war:
 Fix'd in his throat the flying weapon stood,
 And stopp'd his breath, and drank his vital blood. Dryden.
 5. To suppress.
 Every bold sinner, when about to engage in the commission of any known sin, should arrest his confidence, and stop the execution of his purpose with this question: Do I believe that God has denounced death to such a practice, or do I not? South.
 He, on occasion of stopping my play, did me a good office at court, by representing it as long ago designed. Dryden.
 6. To regulate musical strings with the fingers.
 In instruments of strings, if you stop a string high, whereby it hath less scope to tremble, the sound is more treble, but yet more dead. Bacon's Natural History.
 7. To close any aperture.
 Smite every fenced city, stop all wells of water, and mar land with stones. 2 Kings iii. 19.
 They pulled away the shoulder, and stopp'd their ears, that they should not hear. Zech. vii. 11.
 A hawk's bell, the holes stopp'd up, hang by a thread within a bottle-glass, and stop the glass close with wax. Bacon.

 8. To obstruct; to encumber.
 Mountains of ice that stop the imagin'd way. Milton.
 To STOP. v. n. To cease to go forward.
 Some strange commotion
 Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
 Steps on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
 Then lays his finger on his temple; strait
 Springs out into fast gait, then stops again. Shakespeare. H. VIII.
 When men pursue their thoughts of space, they stop at the confines of body, as if space were there at an end. Locke.
 If the rude throng pour on with furious pace,
 And hap to break thee from a friend's embrace,
 Stop short, nor struggle through. Gay.
 STOP. n. f. [from the verb.]
 1. Cessation of progressive motion.
 Thought's the slave of time, and life time's fool;
 And time, that takes survey of all the world,
 Must have a stop. Shakespeare.
 The marigold, whose courtier's face
 Echoes the sun, and doth unlace
 Her at his rise, and at his fall
 Packs and shuts up her gawdy shop,
 Mistakes her cue, and doth display. Cleveland.
 A lion, ranging for his prey, made a stop on a sudden at a hideous yelling noise, which startled him. L'Estrange.
 2. Hindrance of progress; obstruction.
 In weak and tender minds we little know what misery this strict opinion would breed, besides the stops it would make in the whole course of all mens lives and actions. Hosker.
 These gates are not sufficient for the communication between the walled city and its suburbs, as daily appears by the stops and embarras of coaches near both these gates. Grant.
 My praise the Fabii claim,
 And thou great hero, greatest of thy name,
 Ordain'd in war to save the sinking state,
 And, by delays, to put a stop to fate. Dryden's Æn.
 Occult qualities put a stop to the improvement of natural philosophy, and therefore have been rejected. Newton's Opt.
 Brokers hinder trade, by making the circuit which the money goes larger, and in that circuit more stops, so that the returns must necessarily be slower and scantier. Locke.
 Female zeal, though proceeding from so good a principle, if we may believe the French historians, often put a stop to the proceedings of their kings, which might have ended in a reformation. Addison's Freeholder.
 3. Hindrance of action.
 'Tis a great stop towards the mastery of our desires to give this stop to them, and shut them up in silence. Locke.
 4. Cessation of action.
 Look you to the guard to-night;
 Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
 Not to outport discretion. Shakespeare.
 5. Interruption.
 Thou art full of love and honesty,
 And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath;
 Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more. Shakespeare.
 6. Prohibition.
